BRAVES DEATH FOR COMRADES

Priest Invades Enemy's Line to Learn Fate of Absent Bombers.

LONDON, Jan. 6 (by mail).—How a Roman Catholic priest braved death in No Man's Land to learn the fate of some of his comrades in the British trenches is a story just received from northern France. It was in one of the foggiest nights recently that eight British bombers of a famous regiment crawled over the parapet and disappeared toward the enemy trenches. Dawn broke, and they had not appeared. As the day advanced, it was decided as definitely certain that the bombers were either prisoners or lying dead in the muddy expanse that separated the opposing strongholds. Enemy snipers were busy, and it was almost certain death to expose one's self in order to have a look.

Further—attached to the regiment, came sauntering along the firing line. He heard the story and volunteered to try to find the bodies. He left the trench and returned garbed in his surplice, crucifix in hand. Without hesitation he climbed out of the trench and walked fearlessly but slowly toward the German lines.

Men watched him breathlessly through their periscopes, expecting to see him shot down at every step. Not a shot came from the enemy side. As he reached the enemy wire entanglements, the priest was seen to stop and kneel in prayer. He remained thus for some minutes, then arose and walked until he was lost to view from the British side. Later he was rediscovered walking slowly back toward the British trench. He arrived safely and exhibited four identity discs, explaining, also, that the Germans had held up four khaki caps on their bayonets. The mystery was solved: Four of the bombers were prisoners; the others, dead.

The Columbia Theater will give a 10c matinee Saturday 2 p. m. C 115.

COULDN'T BE STOPPED; ENLISTED

Jack Langford, Australian, Had Trouble as He Crossed U. S.

BY WILBUR S. FORREST

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, Jan. 6 (by mail).—Jack Langford has gone back to the North Sea to sweep up some more mines.

Those in the United States who will be particularly interested in hearing this are the skipper of the barkentine Black Adder, Hawaii to Portland; a train crew running between Portland and Seattle; a restaurant keeper in Cheyenne, Wyo.; a German-American justice of the peace at Las Vegas, N. Mex.; a turnkey, also at Las Vegas, who may still be stiff from a beating he suffered at Jack's hands, and roustabouts who make their home amid the shipping at Galveston.

Langford, a stalwart Australian, has returned to his job of sweeping up mines in the North Sea after a leave of absence. The leave was especially granted so that he might celebrate during the holidays the passage of a year crammed full of adventure.

On January 1, 1915, Langford was hoeing pineapples on a plantation near Hilo, Hawaii. On January 2 he was enroute to Portland, Ore., as an able seaman in the forecabin of the bark Black Adder. On February 11 he was riding the rods from Portland to Seattle, and six days later he changed cars at Cheyenne.

On February 17 occurred the first interruption in his trip Londonward. A railroad detective nabbed him at Las Vegas. A German-American justice of peace gave him fourteen days in jail when he said he was enroute to England to fight.

On February 18 Langford was on his way again, having committed violent assault upon his turnkey. On March 1 he landed in Galveston and shipped aboard the cotton steamer Jevington, bound for France. On March 20, the Jevington reached Marseilles, after fleeing from a submarine, and Langford deserted. On April 2 he arrived in London. Exactly three months after quitting the pineapple fields he enlisted in the British navy.

Langford's adventures aren't over, he said before he left London. Only a few days ago, the trawler on which he was working struck a mine and was sunk. The crew was saved and transferred to another mine-sweeper.

FIREMEN KEEP WINTER AWAY

No Chance for the Storm Against a Gang Like This.

Old Man Winter is having a hard time at the fire station.

Last night he tried to freeze out the firemen, but they were ready for him and slept three in a bed.

Seated around a red-hot stove this afternoon, six firemen were reading short stories, telling stories of their own, playing checkers, holding hands (of cards) and defying the monster outside to come in and break up the game. And when things slowed up a bit the little talking machine kept them going. Winter didn't have a chance with a bunch like that.

IOWA MAN HERE TO BUY CORN

J. T. Macklin Visits Members of Missouri Farmers' Exchange.

J. T. Macklin of Letts, Ia., was in Columbia yesterday to arrange for buying corn through the Missouri Farmers' Exchange. He represents a farmers' organization in Iowa and is looking for about 15,000 bushels. Mr. Macklin went on to New Franklin to see members of the exchange there.

The Missouri Farmers' Exchange is an organization of Missouri farmers who are co-operating in the buying and selling of farm products. F. H. Russell, living near Columbia is president of the organization.

FRIENDS HERE IN SPITE OF WAR

Cosmopolitan Club Draws Members From Belligerent Nations.

Although some of the members of the Cosmopolitan Club are drawn from the nations warring in Europe, the sentiment of these members, founded on the motto of the organization, "Above all nations is humanity," is that of brotherhood. Americans also are members of the club.

An open meeting of the club will be held in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium at 8 o'clock tomorrow night. There will be addresses and songs.

Prof. T. B. Veblen Honored.

Prof. T. B. Veblen of the department of economics has been elected vice president of the International Institute of Sociology, which has its headquarters at Paris, France. There are only eight American members of the institute. Prof. C. A. Ellwood of the department of sociology is one.
